Listorical Inquiry. Sence of the Richmond Dispatch.] LOWER BOTETOURY, July 6, 1884. wheat harvest has just closed, after a many interruptions from rain, which seen unusually frequent and abundant, one of the wheat will no doubt be inthe shock. But, if the weather is e from this time forward, there will he a good yield of fine quality. Other crops are promising in this section, and we hear favorably from other sections.

Owing to the difficulty of procuring harvest laborers a large number of self-binding and other reapers have been introduced into this county the present year, which have proved an immense saving to the farmers both of time and labor. The reaper it is a wonderful improvement on farmers both of time and labor. The reaper by itself is a wonderful improvement on the old method of saving wheat, but the self-binder seems to be just the perfection of humen skill in this direction. If Sancho Panza could say in his time and day, "blessed is the man that first invented sleep," how much higher praise is he entitled to that first invented the self-binding reaper, to say nothing of the mower, the hay-rake, and the wheat-drill, which in their way are worthy of all praise as useful inventions.

I have been reading of late, and with more interest than ever before, Jefferson's "Notes on Virginia" (edition of 1784).

On page 131 there is a list of the counties in Virginia as they then existed, seventy-five in number, and the first on the list is fixed, equally, immediate connection. in Virginia as they then existed, seventy-five in number, and the first on the list is Lincoln county, in immediate connection with Jefferson, Fayette, Ohio, M nongalia, Washington, Montgomery, and Greenbrier, as lying "westward of the Alleghany." No county named Lincoln appears in "Howe's Historical Collections" or any other list that I have examined, and I am somewhat enrious to know when this county of Lincoln was formed, and also when it was dropped or became extinct.

| Mess be followed. Cautain E. E. Bouldin is attorney for the company; Mr. Mann, of Notoway, and Mr. S. E. Picken, of Hensonius are counted for the plaintiff. Mr. Pickelsimer came here on the caboose, got on the freight-car here to ride across the rever, and was to have gotten on a cuboose at Dundee, and the question, I understand, is what directions he received when he got off the caboose here.

CHARLOTTESVILLE. when it was dropped or became extinct. Can you or Mr. Brock, or some other anti-quarian in the early history of Virginia, give me this information? We know that the es of some of the earlier-formed counties have been changed. For instance, Dunmore was the first name for Shenandeah, or Shenande as it was first called. Howe, in his "Historical Sketches," states that Shenan-deah was established in 1772 from Frede-rick, under the name of Dunmore, but in October, 1777, after Lord Dunmore had one of the delegates from the county stated that his "constituents no longer wished to live in or he to represent a county bearing the name of such a tory; he therefore moved to call it Shemandoah, after the beautiful stream that passes through it"; and this was accordingly done. For a somewhat similar reason the county of Fineastle, which was formed in 1772 from the southwestern portion of Boietourt, was dropped in 1776, the "Puke of Fineastle" being the title of the older son of Lord Dummore. But no such reasons as these could have existed for changing or dropping the name of Lincoln, as it was no doubt named for the distinguished General Benjamin Lincoln, of the Revolutionary army, on whom Washington conferred the honor of receiving the submission of the British troops on the mission of the British troops on the hearty coöperation. The society has on ary army, on whom Washington conferred the honor of receiving the submission of the British troops on the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. Can it he that Mr. Jefferson was mistaken, and that no such name was given to one of the counties in Virginia? This seems improbable to the last degree, as it would cast doubt upon the general accuracy of Mr. Jefferson in other matters of equal notoriety, and his character for strict accuracy has never been questioned that I know of. Supposing that he was not mistaken, and that a county named Liucoln existed in and previous to 1784, when did it become extinct by that name, and what was its exact locality? We can account for the fact that this name was given to one of the counfies of West Virginia, since it was Abraham Lincoln's proclamation of April, 1861, that brought about the disruption which ended in the birth of what Henry A. Wise called "the bastard of-spring of a political rape"; and the county of Liucoln is now embraced within the Eighth judicial circuit of West Virginia, composed of the countres of Cabell, Lincoln become and Wayne.

The new Council has fallen somewhat under censure because it elected a colored Republican over a colored Democrat as keeper of the cemetery for colored people. There were about six tie votes in that case, and some eloquence was expended.

There were about six tie votes in that case, and some eloquence was expended.

There were streams of people from the country and from the town preclucts on the streets on the 4th, and Mayor Graves was kept quite busy with small cases on the 5th. There was one remarkable case. A man from the Cascade section had won a watch and an amount of money from a man named Ellis, from Halifax, N. C., and during the consideration of this case a third party appeared and claimed that Ellis had stolen the watch from him, and so Ellis was lodged in jail to await the action of the grand jury. But, speaking of the 4th, a number of the older and more thoughtful citizens have been seriously considering the propriety and feasibility of some concerted action for the celebration of the 4th hereafter in a way not heretofore attempted in the Virginia cities.

At about 4:30 A. M. Felipe roused me out of a troubled sleep to inform me that all was ready for starting. After a hearty breakfast on brown crude sugar and somewhat ancient and hard bread, we started forward on another journey of at least 125 miles more. I purposed to skirt the grand Bay or Gulf of Fonseca as near as possible, and reach Chinandega, Nicaragua, by the way of Choiuteca.
